ANTIOCH ENTERTAINS MANY PEOPLE

An Estimated Crowd of 5,000 People Attends Picnic Says Rumor

VERY LITTLE EXCITEMENT

We have been telling our readers for several weeks past what they could expect in the way of a good time here the Fourth, and just as they always do the Firemen put up just as good, or even a better line of entertainment than they had promised beforehand.

The weather was ideal and promptly at 9:30 o'clock music was heard advancing from the south and the Allendale boys arrived on the scene in military order keeping step to music furnished by the Allendale band. According to schedule as they arrived in front of the Simons house they gave an exhibition of their military training. At the close of this drill the parade started headed first by the Allendale band followed by the firemen, next in line came the old soldiers with fife and drum corps lead by Uncle Sam. Then came the fire fighting apparatus including the old hand pump labeled, "Out of Date but comes in Handy" and drawn by a span of mules. Then came the floats of the Rebeckah's, Royal Neighbors and Court of Honor. A load of little folks from Lake Villa and several prettily decorated autos and bringing up in the rear was Sambo and Dinah in their holiday attire.

It would be hard to tell which was the best feature in the parade, but suffice to s y that on a whole it was a very creditable showing for a town of this size and showed a marked interest had been taken by those in charge.

As early as nine o'clock it looked as though everybody and all their friends from everywhere had lined up on Main street to see the fun. And as the last of the parade passed, the crowd fell in line following toSavage's grove to spend the day in taking in the doings and renewing old acquaintances. The entertainment of the morning consisted of music by the Allendale band, selections by the Choral society and speeches by James Welch of Waukegan. Father Lynch and Rev. Hester.

In the afternoon the always great attraction a ball game was pulled off, the Rumarea's giving the Kenosha team a good round dubbing with a score of 34 to 8. For those who were not interested in the game there were other attractions such as races, contests, games etc., also open air dancing with good lively music.

In the evening there was a big display of fireworks which surpassed anything of the kind ever seen in Antioch. The day light fireworks were set off at intervals and caused no end of amusement.

Taking it all together it was the best picnic of any that the firemen have so far given, and that the public appreciated their efforts is shown by the patronage awarded to them.

Use for the Broken Clock.

If a small clock is beyond repair do not throw it away. An excellent idea is to set it aside to be used in case of illness. It will be found just the thing to place in the sick room to indicate the next time for taking medicine. As each dose is given to the patient turn the hands to the hour when the following dose is to be given. In this way all danger of errors is eliminated.

Failing of the Fair Sex.

MISS PERKINS OF KENOSHA WEDS DAKOTAN

One of the prettiest of this season's weddings was that of Miss Brosia Perkins, only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Perkins, Kenosha, to Dr. William Schoonmaker of Arlington, S. D., which occurred Tuesday night, the Rev. Thomas Faville officiating.

The parlor in which the ceremony took place was literally a bower of sweet syringas which banked the walls and were festooned about the doors and suspended from the ceiling. The living room was decorated with pink gladiolas and pink roses and the dining room with pink peonies.

The bride wore her traveling gown of blue. She was unattended. While the ceremony was being performed, the four grandmothers, all of whom are widows, were given the places of honor, two on either side of the contracting parties. They were Mrs. L. Schoonmaker of Chicago, and Mrs. Searles, Joliet, grandmothers of the groom; and Mrs. Perkins of Burlington, and Mrs. Howard of Kenosha, grandmothers of the bride.

The ceremony was performed at 8 p. m., directly after which Dr. and Mrs. Schoonmaker left for their future home. They slipped away in a taxi waiting for them in an alley while the guests watched one standing on Church street, purposely placed to mislead them.

Mr. and Mrs. John Perkins were former residents of this village.

Hurt in Fall From Buggy

Monday evening, Max Spitzenbergen, who is employed at Hurz'n Sepp's resort, met with an accident which will lay him up for some time. He had been to Antioch and was enroute home, sitting on the top of a large chicken coop in the buggy. When he reached the west road near the Wm. Runyard place he in some way fell from the rig, striking heavily on his head thus rendering him unconscious. The horse proceeded homeward and the man was left in the road in danger of being run over by a machine at any time. In fact, tracks show where a large car had missed him by only a short space, but for some reason did not stop to investigate. A short time latter Dewey Brownell happened along and seeing the form in the road. Seeing the man's condition he went for help and the injured man was taken to Dr. Warriner's office. It was found he had a broken wrist and was suffering from a bad bump on his head, his face was also badly cut.

Married at Mt. Vernon, Iowa

On Wednesday of last week, June 28, John Darby of this place was united in marriage to Mrs. Catherine Wheelock, of Mt. Vernon, Iowa.

The marriage was performed by Rev. Stixrud of Elgin, at the home of the bride in Mt. Vernon. Mrs. Mary Adams of this place, sister of the groom was present at the ceremony.

Mr. and Mrs. Darby are planning to make their future home in Antioch, and will be at home here after July 15.

The groom is well known in this village and his many friends are offering him their most hearty congratulations and are only awaiting their arrival to extend the right hand of welcome to his bride, who comes as a stranger to our midst.

"LET 'ER SLIDE."

When your troubles seem to come in flocks, and you are sorely tried, and it looks as though the clouds would never break, you can smile if you will do so, you can say, I'll let 'er slide. Just relax and see the change that it will make. Watch the rays of joyous sunshine brighten up the path for you, when the woes have pulled their freight and you are free. Being cheerful is a habit just, the same as feeling blue; cut the grief and say, it's let 'er slide for me. I will change my ways of thinking; I'll enjoy instead of fret. What's the use of wasting time in feeling sad. Being overanxious never has done any good as yet, so I'll ditch the whine and cut out feeling bad. I will go in for a pleasant time and laugh dull care away; I'll disperse the thoughts of discontent, and face the sun today. Feeling good is just the knack of knowing how. It is worth a little solid thought, when you are batting wide to adjust your mental works to come across and forget your cares and troubles and say, I'll let 'er slide. Do not be controlled, insist that you are Boss. Lorin H. Gingles

AGED LADY IS BURNED TO DEATH

Dress Catches on Fire While Lighting Her Pipe and is Enveloped in Flamee

WAS ALONE IN HER HOUSE

At 4 o'clock last Thursday afternoon Mrs. Mary Stroink of Fourth Lake was burned to death.

The aged woman was past 82—was a wonderful character and though it was known to few, was the central figure in Opie Read's famous story "A Yankee of the West.

Mrs. Stoink perished because she was of an age that is gone and because she steadily clung to the habits of the pioneer woman of Illinois; hard working, strong women, who after their day's work at the side of their stalwart husbands were wont to sit beside the latter pipe in hand.

For the aged personage alone in the house was smoking when the accident happened. She told those who rushed to her aid, that much. Whether her clothes caught fire firom a lighted match or from burning tobacco lighting on her dress was not disclosed. It is thought that the former was the case, as when neighbors entered her home, there was a small fire in the corner of the room, where the burning match may have fallen. There was no other explanation of the blaze offered.

When Mrs. Stoink discovered that her dress was on fire, she did what nearly every excited person in her predicament instinctively does. She rushed into the open. The wind fanned the flames into further activity.

Screaming she ran toward the home of a neighbor but the only ones there were two small girls. They heard the cries and ran toward the unfortunate woman, but could think of no way to aid her. One of the little girls ran to the fields where her brothers were working and summoned them.

When they came, they wrapped their coats about the victim, extinguishing the blaze. Their efforts were too late, however, as the fire had seared her body.

There was hardly a place that was not crispen. The soles of the feet, said her son, Geo Sheldon, were the only spots not seared.

Attempt was made to reach her sons, George, Fred and Charles Sheldon, but the latter was the only one to reach his mother's side before she passed away. Though in great agony, Mrs. Stoink was conscious until a few moments before life left her.

Born in Ohio, the deceased had lived in Illinois 64 years, nearly all that time in the vicinity where she met her tragic end. She is survived by six children, George, Charles and Fred Sheldon of Fourth Lake; Mrs. Nancy Bilty of Chicago; Mrs. Ann Stang of Waukegan; Carl Sheldon of Edison Park. Mrs. Stoink was married twice.

MRS. ERMA STRANG DIES AT HER HOME AT MILLBURN

Mrs. Erma Strang, aged 50 years, of Millburn, died at 9 o'clock Tuesday morning of this week. She had spent the winter in California, returning home about three weeks ago, at that time seeming to be in the best of health. The following day she did not feel well and lay down on the bed. She lost consciousness and remained in a state of como up to the time of her death. It is believed she suffered a stroke of paralysis. She leaves three children, two sons and a daughter. The funeral was held on Thursday at 1:30 o'clock at the house, burial in Millburn cemetery.

The deceased was a sister of Leola Hughes of this village.

Everything Ready For the Big Chautauqua, Many People Expected to Attend

The Fourth of July has come and gone, the big celebration is over, and now attention is turned to the Chautauqua which begins here Tuesday, July 11, and closes Sunday, July 16. Six big days of high class entertainment. Three sessions each day. Youth's Chautanqua each morning, and a good program each afternoon and evening.

The first day, Bland's Collegians, a live college bunch will give an orchestral concert, and Rufus E. King will in the afternoon speaks on "The Almighty Dollar." His evening subject will be "The New Age."

The second day Francis Hughe's Male singers, a troup of unusual vocalists, will give a grand concert, and Dr. Ira Laudrith, the famous southern orator will speak both afternoon and evening.

On the third day comes the Halik Entertainers and also Tom Corwine of Kentucky. If you want to laugh and laugh some more don't miss Corwine he imitates anything from a bumble bee to a saw mill.

The fourth day brings us Niles Hussar Band with one of their ever popular band concerts, assisted by Mme. Lillian Ringsdorf with vocal selections and readings. On this day Hon. Clifford G. Roe, Assistant Corporation Counsel of Chicago is also on the program.

The fifth day, we will be entertained by the Mildred Morrison company with their old English songs and other special features. In the afternoon Louise L. McIntyre will speak on "Health and Hygiene." In the evening there will be an illustrated lecture by Hon. Arthur K. Peck of Boston whose subject will be "Storm Heroes of Our Coast."

On the closing day there will be a special musical program for Sunday by the American opera Quartette. In the afternoon Helen B. Paulsen will speak. In the evening Ralph Parlette will speak on, "The University of Hard Knocks." This is the closing number of the Chautauqua.

This is only a brief outline of the six days entertainment. A more detailed account of each day's feature may be had by reading one of the circulars which may be obtained from any of the Chautauqua Boosters.

The opportunity to hear talent of this kind comes but once a year. Don't miss it.

Music Students Graduate

For teachers' normal course certificates piano department, Mrs. Caroline Girard, and Miss Ella Jensen. Vocal department, Mrs. Lenora Hughes; Senior academic course, Misses Viola Kuhaupt, Jannette Wallace, Edna Potter, Helen Kerr, Marie Johonnott, Gladys Crandall, Mabel Falch and Harlie Davis; also Leland Watson and Louis Horton. This class of ten are the pupils of Mrs. Ziegler.

Device Takes Place of Nets.

One way of catching herring is by driving nails into a board so that they stick out several inches. The boards are then dragged through the shoals and the fish catch between the nails and are pulled by the boardful into the boats. In one year more than 1,000,000 pounds of herring were caught at Prince Rupert and frozen by the cold storage plants to be sold for bait. Something like 125,000 pounds of cod fish are annually taken for the same purpose.—The Christian Herald.

Age Not Always a Remedy for Squint.

It is a popular superstition that a child will grow out of a squint. This is true in some cases—those of the temporary squint of infants, for instance, but even then, according to the British Journal of Children's Diseases, it should be a warning that the brain's control over the eyes is weak and that when the child goes to school or has a serious illness the squint may become permanent. Even if the eye be straightened it will have lost its power of vision.

CARRANZA PLACES BLAME ON AMERICA IN DEFIANT NOTE

Formal Notice by Foreign Minister That United States Troops Withdraw.

CAN DEAL WITH THE BANDITS

Presence of Our Soldiers Declared a Violation of the National Rights—Says Mexicans Have Been Slain in Texas—Released Soldiers Safe at El Paso.

Mexico, City, July 1.—Formal notice has been served upon the United States government by the de facto government of Mexico that the presence of American troops would not be longer tolerated upon the soil of Mexico.

This notification was contained in a statement given out by the foreign minister as an answer to the recent note of President Wilson.

The Mexican government charges the United States with sending a haughty and discourteous communication, and the attention of the United States authorities is called to the fact that Mexicans have been murdered upon the border, where no attempt was made to punish the perpetrators.

Blames U. S. for Massacre.

The Mexican foreign office lays the blame for the killing of 18 Americans at Santa Ysabel upon the victims for attempting a journey across territory that was known to be dangerous.

It is declared that the pursuit of the bandits under the leadership of Francisco Villa was taken at once after they began their depredations, and that the duty of stamping out these outlaws rests with Mexico, and not with the United States.

In substance, the Mexican government denies the right of American troops to occupy Mexican territory, and declares that the presence of United States troops in this country is a violation of the national rights.

Declares U. S. Stand Strange.

The statement follows:

"It seems strange that the department of state should show surprise and disappointment for the tone and character of the note of the 22nd of May, which it calls discourteous, when the very same department of state has sent to the constitutionalist government not one, but many notes not only discourteous, but also haughty, to say the least.

"During the same period to which the note alludes 140 Mexicans have been murdered in United States territory by American civilians, and the same government authorities have also participated, although the two countries were at peace, and in none of those cases, although representations have been made to the department of state through our minister at Washington the guilty have never been brought to justice or punished.

Mexico Denies Responsibility.

"These acts have been committed by Americans in American territory or by Texan-Americans against the lives and interests of the same Americans. The government of Mexico cannot be held responsible for those acts which have taken place in foreign territory, and which should be charged to the nationals of another country.

"Besides, the American government was well aware of all these facts before recognizing the Constitutionalist government and it now appears irrelevant, or out of place, to bring these facts forward so as to make a base for an unjustified negative to withdraw the American troops from our country.

"It is not true that the Mexican government or its authorities have protected or covered the criminals who are claimed to have committed these depredations and crimes in territory of the United States. This can never be proven by the American government.

"The constitutionalist government has done all in its power, and has gone beyond all efforts to protect the foreigners who are to be blamed to a great extent for persisting in remaining in places where conditions were not normal, although its own government on various occasions has asked them not to remain there.

"If our own citizens had to suffer a great deal on account of actual conditions, it is not just that foreigners should pretend and expect to be immune.

"Did Not Wait for Escort."

"The chief or manager, who lost his life in the calamity of Santa Ysabel, and who was in charge of the Americans—his name was Charles Watson—persisted in making the disastrous trip, although Gen. Jacinto B. Trevino, military commander of the state of Chihuahua, advised him of the danger and risk that he and his fellow companions were running in traveling through a dangerous region.

"Watson did not wait until an escort could be furnished for the train, and, as he was a man very impulsive, and always desiring to impose his authority, and possessing a very bad temper, his own temperament carried him to his doom, together with the rest of his companions.

"General Gavira, from the sixth day of March, notified American military authorities that he had been advised that Villa, leading a band of marauders, was on his way to the frontier, going through Palomas.

"This notice, given in ample time, should have prepared the American authorities for the oncoming danger on account of the presence of Villa at Palomas and Columbus."

Freed Soldiers Reach El Paso.

El Paso, Tex., June 30.—Twenty-three American troopers and one civilian scout captured in the Carrizal fight reached here Thursday. They were released by Carranza following a demand made by the United States.

"It was treachery," they cried; "we thought they were friendly. They pretended to be until they had us surrounded. Then the slaughter began. We didn't have a chance. The Mexicans even killed our wounded when the fight was over."

A ragged and dirty band it was that came home, punctured by bullets and gaunt from prison privations. But nobody better than themselves knows how glad they were to get back to United States soil.

Men Are Fumigated.

The little squad had been marched to the basement of the immigration station at the American entrance to the bridge for fumigation. As they rubbed down their bodies with vinegar and oil, they spoke. It was the first time since the eventful morning of Wednesday, June 21, that they had a chance to speak freely, for a hostile Mexican guard always was at their elbow.

Pershing Retiring to Border.

Washington, July 3.—Information was received in Washington that General Pershing's army is within 100 miles of the border.

Army officers say General Pershing's new position shows he has withdrawn 30 miles from the position he held when his farther advance was arrested by General Carranza's orders.

State department officials confirmed the report. Army officers had known this fact for 48 hours, though the strict censorship prevented its being made public.

These officers assert that as the army is under the control of the state department the retirement of so large a force as the American expeditionary force is due to reasons of state and not to fear of attack. Officers estimate the Mexican army in the rear and on the flank of General Pershing at 35,000 men. The same experts assert that, although Pershing's army is composed of only 16,000 men, it is more than a match for General Trevino's forces.

Due to Reasons of State.

War department officials admitted that there no longer is any danger of attack on General Pershing. They say his retirement over such a long line of march would be regarded necessarily by Carranza as a partial acquiescence by President Wilson in the demand that the American troops be withdrawn from Mexico. The American retirement, although gradual, is an admission, they say, that the Mexican army is more competent to preserve order on the Mexican side of the border and to prevent incursions into the United States.

State department officials said that the retirement of General Pershing will facilitate diplomatic discussion.

Fire on American Guard.

Columbus, N. M., July 3.—Reports of the return of the Mexican garrison to Ascencion, on General Pershing's line of communication, were received with renewed attention here.

Mexicans who fired at the American border gate guard last night made good their escape in the darkness before dawn. Patrols dispatched to find them returned after having lost the trail. Investigation of the adobe house from which the shots were fired revealed that Mexicans had been there last evening.

Border patrols have been doubled again out of this base, east and west. Orders were issued to run down every trace of mounted Mexicans within raiding distance of the international boundary.

Calls from every encampment along the line of communication between Columbus and General Pershing's headquarters are ordered on regular intervals. Close attention is given each report of Mexican troops concentration near the expeditionary column.

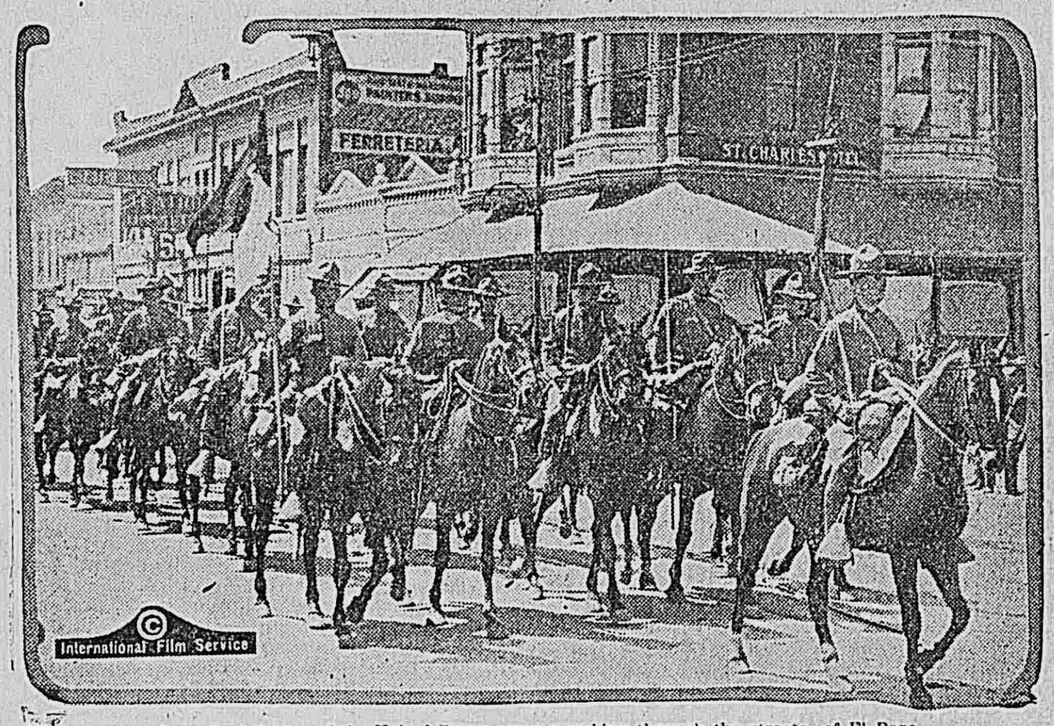

To Be Buried in U. S.

El Paso, Tex., July 3.—The bodies of Captain Boyd and Lieutenant Adair will be brought back from Carrizal for interment in American soil. Gen. George Bell, Jr., has arranged for El Paso undertakers to go to Carrizal. Safe conduct for the party has been granted by First Chief Carranzas. No United States soldiers will accompany them. The bodies will be sent to the homes of the victims for burial.

Send for American Bodies.

El Paso, Tex., July 3.—General Bell announced he had employed a corps of local undertakers to go to Carrizal to bring here the bodies of the American soldiers slain in the engagement there. The undertakers will go into Mexico under the personal guarantee of safety from Gen. Alvaro Obregon, Mexican minister of war.

ALLIES HAVE BEGUN EXPECTED ADVANCE

Hundreds of Thousands of Troops Storm the Trenches of the Germans.

LONDON CLAIMS BIG GAINS

Asserts Positions of the Enemy Have Been Taken and His Line Penetrated at Many Points—Berlin Makes Light of the Results of Attack.

London, July 3.—Furious German counter-attacks failed to halt the French and British on the second day of their offensive. The Berlin official report admits gains of the allies both north and south of the River Somme. The German stronghold at Fricourt was taken by the British, and the French have captured a stone quarry, heavily fortified, east of Curlu.

Peronne, another German stronghold and an important base, was threatened by advances both from the north and south.

South of the Somme the French penetrated the second line of German defenses, capturing the village of Franz and the Mereaucourt woods, according to the French official report. A footing was gained by the French between the river and Asservillieres.

During the two days' advance the French captured 6,000 and the British 8,500 prisoners.

The French offensive apparently is to extend to the Champagne region, reconnoitering parties having penetrated the German trenches.

In the Verdun fighting the French held the Thiaumont fortifications against heavy attacks.

"The fighting is continuing. The French attack on our immediate right is proceeding equally satisfactorily.

"On the remainder of the British front raiding parties again succeeded in penetrating the enemy's defenses at many points, inflicting loss on the enemy and taking some prisoners."

Begun When Verdun Danger Grew.

The front for the British offensive was selected many weeks ago, and the bombardment of the rest of the line as well as the frequent raids which procured for British headquarters important information as to the disposition of the Germans, was designed to keep the German generals uncertain as to the point at which they would be called upon to meet the brunt of the attack. A week ago, when the German attacks against Verdun began to make further headway, and it was feared the army of the crown prince was getting within a distance of Verdun which was dangerous for the allies, the British guns began to speak. Since then, except for the hours when British infantrymen were raiding German trenches, a continual bombardment has been maintained.

Batteries took turns at smashing the German defenses, destroying communication trenches and blowing up ammunition depots. New trench mortars, particularly destructive, tore away wire entanglements, broke down parapets and generally opened the way for men with rifles and bayonets. Big guns of 15 inches and other large calibers prevented the Germans from bringing up supports, wrecking everything within range.

French Advance Continues.

The French official report follows:

"To the north of the Somme the fighting continued to our advantage throughout the day in the region of Hardecourt and Curlu. East of Curlu we have captured a quarry, which had been powerfully organized by the Germans.

"To the south of the Somme we have gained a footing at numerous points in the second German line, between the river and Asservillieres. The village of Franz fell into our hands, together with the wood of Mereaucourt, farther to the east.

"The number of unwounded prisoners captured by the French troops counted to date, is more than 6,000, of whom 150 are officers. We have also taken a number of cannon and a great deal of war material. Thanks to our complete and efficacious artillery preparation and also to the elan of our infantry, our losses were very small.

"On the front north of Verdun there were no infantry actions. The bombardment continued actively in the region of hill No. 304 and the sectors of Fleury and Damloup.

"Our aviators caused three captive balloons to catch fire in the region of Verdun. Sergeant Chainat brought down his fifth German machine, which was smashed by its fall near Peronne. During the night of July 1 and 2 one of our air squadrons dropped forty-eight shells on the railway station of Longuyon, eight on the station of Thionville, and sixteen on the station of Dun. Another squadron threw thirty-five shells on the station at Brieulles.

"During the day twelve of our aeroplanes bombarded the station at Amagne-Lucquy. Sixty shells were thrown on the buildings and railway tracks. A train was destroyed.

Bombs on Open City.

"The Germans threw some heavy caliber shells in the direction of Nancy. Others were fired a little later against the Belfort region.

"A squadron of German aeroplanes dropped a number of bombs on the open city of Luneville. We have taken note of this for reprisals."

The British official report follows:

"Substantial progress has been made in the vicinity of Fricourt, which was captured by our troops. Up to noon Sunday 500 more prisoners had been taken in the operations between the Ancre and the Somme, bringing the total up to 3,500, including those captured on other parts of the front the night before."

BERLIN CALLS ATTACK FAILURE

Says Enemy Has Obtained No Advantage Worthy of Mention.

Berlin, July 3.—The official statement follows:

"Western theater—The great Anglo-French offensive in massed attack, which had been extensively prepared for months past, began on a front of 25 miles after strong artillery and gas preparation of six days on both sides of the Somme and Ancre Brook. From Gommecourt as far as the region of La Boiselle the enemy obtained no advantages worthy of mention and lost heavily.

"On the other hand, he was successful in penetrating several points in the first line trenches of our division in the region abutting on both banks of the Somme and was able to advance. This division had to be withdrawn from the heavily shelled first line into a position arranged for checking an advance from the first to second lines. The materials in the first line which could not be moved were rendered useless.

"There were many artillery actions and minor attacks on the adjoining front west and southwest of Tahure, in which the enemy had no success.

"On the left bank of the Meuse at Hill 304 trench sections were captured and a hand grenade attack was repulsed.

"East of the Meuse the enemy, strongly re-enforced, repeated his attacks on Frold Terre hill, especially against the Thiaumont works, but was compelled to retire under our curtain of fire.

"In the region of the front attack 15 enemy aeroplanes were shot down within our lines."

Germany Plans Great Baltic Move.

Copenhagen, July 3.—The Svenska Dagbladet of Stockholm declares Germany is preparing for a great offensive in the Baltic. Many German torpedo boats and destroyers have arrived in Libau. The command of the fleet, it is said, will be transferred from Kiel to Libau.

Austrian Attack Wanes.

London, July 3.—Italian gains made at several points northwest of Trent, in the Chiese valley and the dispersal of Austrian concentrations in Lagarina valley are considered indicative of the further weakening of the Austrian offensive due to the withdrawal of soldiers to meet the Russian offensive. In the last few days the Austrian official reports have not claimed gains on the Italian front.

Berlin Claims Air Victories.

Berlin, July 3.—The official report issued by the general army headquarters said:

"The enemy's aerial service displayed great activity yesterday and today. Our squadrons gave battle at various points and inflicted upon him heavy losses. For instance, in the region of the Somme and in that of the Meuse 15 enemy aeroplanes were shot down, eight English and three French machines falling within our lines. Lieut. Baron von Althaus put out of action his seventh opponent. We lost no aeroplanes."

British in Many Fights.

London, July 3.—An official report issued by the war office said:

"Yesterday our aeroplanes were very active in co-operation with our attack north of the Somme and afforded assistance to our operations. Numerous enemy headquarters and railway centers were attacked with bombs.

"In one of these raids our escorting aeroplanes were attacked by 20 Fokkers, which were driven off. Two enemy machines were seen to fall."

Russia Claims Success.

Petrograd, July 3.—General Letchitzky's army, after intense fighting, has taken by storm the Austrian positions in the region west of Kolomea, in Galicia, says the Russian official statement issued here. The statement adds that up to the present 2,000 prisoners have been taken in this sector.

Desperate attacks against the Russian line at various points have been repulsed, according to an official statement issued at the war office, although preceded by "gusts of fire" and made by infantry in mass formation.

PROTECTED BY THE TROOPS

Ill-Treatment the Captured Americans Received Was at the Hands of Mobs, They Say.

El Paso, Tex., June 30.—The released troopers all agreed that from the time they were captured they had been treated courteously, the only signs of hostility being manifested by the civilian population. The first 17 captured believed, they said, they were to be taken to Villa Ahumada to be shot. None expected to escape alive.

A large mob were gathered along the road, and pelted them with stones, cursing and jeering at them. However, their escort warned the civilians that unless the violence was stopped they would fire into the throng.

The troopers' arms were tied behind their backs and they were placed in stock cars, being told they were to be taken "to see General Trevino." Reaching the capital, they again were mobbed and stoned. At the penitentiary they were treated well.

Want Villa's Machine Guns.

Chihuahua, June 30.—High officials of the de facto government said here that it would be a "very graceful act" on the part of the United States government if it would return ten machine guns and other war material recovered by the American troops in fights with Villistas.

Jose Chavez, who had been operating in eastern Chihuahua, near Hacienda, has surrendered to Maj. Timoteo Rodriguez at Esmeralda, it is reported.

ITALY CLAIMS SOME SUCCESS

Austrians Said to Have Been Driven From Their Positions and Many Prisoners Taken.

Rome, July 3.—Infantry attacks in the Arsa valley with the artillery shelling Fort Pobbachio are reported.

The Austrians were driven from their trenches north of Pedescola and between Selz and Monfalcone. In the latter engagement 196 prisoners were taken. The official statement follows:

"Between the Adige and Brenta valleys our offensive still continues.

"In the Arsa valley our infantry is attacking between Zugna Torta and Folpiano, while our artillery is shelling Fort Pozzachio.

"In the Pasubio zone the Austrians are making a stubborn resistance between Mount Spil and Cosmagnon. We have completed our conquest of Mount Majo and have occupied the southern side of Mount Seluggio.

"North of Pedescala we drove the Austrians from their trenches."

"Deadly Weapons" in Law.

The use to which an article is put and not the nature of the article determines whether such article is a dangerous and deadly weapon under a ruling by Judge Keogh of the city court of Norwalk, Conn. In a recent criminal action the defendant was charged with having struck the complainant with a cylindrical block of wood six inches long and three inches in diameter. The prosecution claimed that such block was "a dangerous and deadly weapon" within the meaning of the Connecticut criminal code, but Judge Keogh decided otherwise, declaring that if the prosecution's claim was true a feather duster used "to tickle a man to death" would also be a dangerous and deadly weapon.

Needless Expense.

A traveling man for a Boston house tells of an incident that he observed in one of the northern towns of Aroostock County, Maine. He was seated in the smoking room of the station when a typical Frenchman, from across the border of Canada, appeared at the ticket window and asked the agent for a ticket to Lewiston.

"Straight or return?" inquired the agent.

"W'at you mean, 'straight or return'?" inquired the Frenchman, bewildered.

"Why," said the agent, "a straight ticket will take you to Lewiston only, and a return ticket will bring you back here."

The Frenchman understood at once. "Say," he shouted, "w'at for you t'ink I want som return ticket w'en I am already on de place?"

The Only Way.

Trade was bad. At the end of another blank day the discouraged salesman called on another prospective customer and asked to show his samples.

"No, there is nothing I want today," said the customer.

"But will you just examine my line of goods?" the salesman persisted.

The customer would not.

"Then," said the salesman meekly, "will you let me use a part of your counter to look at them myself, as I have not had the opportunity for some time."

Wanted Some.

"I saw some nice trout in the market this morning," remarked Fisher.

"Did you?" said his wife. "Well, I wish you would go fishing this afternoon."

Transforming a Desert

By Robert H. Moulton

An Illinois farmer reclaimed his tract from the sand blasts by planting shrubs and trees in the right spots — how the problem was solved.

COTTONWOOD WHICH GAVE THE TREE PLANTER HIS IDEA

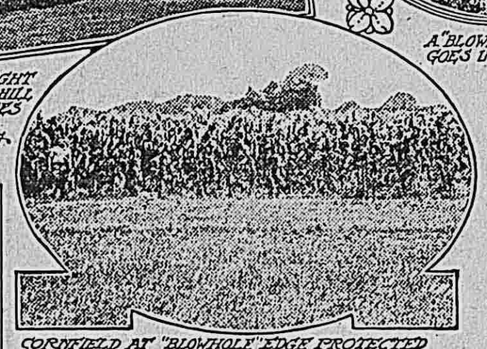

DRIFTING SAND ALMOST COVERED OLD FENCE POSTS BUT WAS STOPPED BY TREES

A "BLOWHOLE"—TEMPERATURE GOES UP TO 150 DEGREES

HILL ON RIGHT WAS LIKE SAND HILL ON LEFT UNTIL TREES WERE PLANTED TO STOP SAND BLOWING.

CORNFIELD AT "BLOWHOLE" EDGE PROTECTED BY TREES

IF HE is a benefactor of mankind who makes two blades of grass grow where only one grew before, what shall be said of the man who transforms a waste of barren sand into a beautiful, useful forest?

The thought came to me as I rested in the shade of a big cottonwood tree, one of a long line bordering the edge of a miniature Sahara which glistened white and forbidding under the rays of noonday July sun. When one has toiled for three hours through scorching sand into which his feet sink to his shoe tops every step, packing a camera and outfit weighing some 40 pounds, any spot that affords a bit of shade seems a haven of rest. But when, after such an experience, he enters the protection of a veritable oasis of trees, and grass and flowers, he is ready to admit that this is a pretty good old world after all. And when he realizes that the said oasis was created in a few years through the efforts of one man, his admiration for that man's ability becomes as great as his bodily relief.

In Whiteside county, Illinois, A. J. Abbott is known first of all as a farmer, notwithstanding that for a score of years he has represented his district in the state legislature. As president of the Illinois Farmers' Institute and director of one of the state's demonstration farms, Mr. Abbott has done a notable work. In the midst of this work he has found time to cultivate a hobby, which is, not to see how many bushels of corn or oats or wheat he can produce on a given amount of land, but to make something grow where absolutely nothing grew before. The 60 or 70 acres of sand hills on his farm which he has reclaimed in a few years, clothing them with a luxuriant forest of locust, cottonwood and walnut trees, speaks eloquently of the practicability as well as the success of his scheme. More than that, these trees, acting as sandbinders, have increased many fold the value of the rest of his land, for they protect his growing crops on the rich soil from the inroads of the shifting sand.

The presence of the sand hills on Mr. Abbott's farm makes an interesting little story. The land lies three or four miles east of the Mississippi river in western Illinois, on the edge of what is known as the River bottoms. When in geological ages the channel of the Mississippi was changed, the sand in the river bed was blown upon the bluffs on the east side of the channel. In the course of time the growth of vegetation in the old bed, aided by the silt deposited by flood waters, made the river bottoms exceedingly fertile farm lands. Eventually, too, the sand blown up on the bluffs became covered with grass, and, with the advent of the white man, became the grazing ground of great herds of cattle. The grass on the hills is more nutritious than that in the valleys, so the hills were grazed closely. Then in a dry season the grass was killed, the tramping of many hoofs broke up the turf, and the sand began to blow, always from the southwest to the northeast, covering up everything in its course and burying fertile land.

This was the situation faced by Mr. Abbott when he came into possession of his farm, and for a long time those dreary sand dunes were a thorn in his side. Acres of land were going to waste, and, what was worse, every year saw the sand encroaching still more on cultivated land.

Then one day he had an idea. Standing on the summit of one of the sand hills, as if to accentuate the utter barrenness of its surroundings, was a solitary gigantic cottonwood tree, with a girth of at least 16 feet. How the seed from which it sprang got there, and by what miracle it had outstripped in growth any other tree in the county was something to ponder on. But if one tree would grow in the sand, why not others? Why couldn't they be made to grow there?

No sooner was the plan conceived than Mr. Abott began to experiment. Not knowing any better, he at first planted many trees not adapted to a sandy soil, but soon found that the black locust and cottonwood made the most satisfactory growth. The locust in particular did exceedingly well, being a legume which secures its nitrogen from the air through the ministration of the bacteria on its roots. Moreover, a loose, sandy soil permits both air and water to enter, instead of the rain running off as in the case where a tough sod covers the ground, thus making ideal conditions for the development of the bacteria.

Having discovered the right kind of tree, Mr. Abbott entered into the work of planting them with enthusiasm. For deciduous trees he soon discovered that a yearling plant was preferable to an older one, being easier to plant, costing less, and standing a better chance to live. Year-old deciduous trees can usually be secured from reliable nurserymen for $5 or less per thousand, while the cost of planting them is relatively small, as two men can easily plant 3,000 trees a day.

The result of the first planting was apparent in a little over a year, as the trees, which were then three or four feet high and in a flourishing condition, successfully checked the sand blowing. In a couple of seasons more the leaves falling to the ground formed a forest mulch, which helped retain the moisture, and grass began to creep in, eventually giving to the land a value for grazing which it did not possess before.

Altogether Mr. Abbott has planted some 50,000 trees on approximately 50 acres of land, or at the rate of 1,000 trees per acre, the spacing being about 6 by 7 feet. These trees have not only increased the value of the land on which they stand about four-fold, but have proved most effective barriers in protecting cultivated fields from the few remaining blowholes. The heat in these blowholes during the summer sometimes reaches 150 degrees. It is rather remarkable, however, that even at such a time, moisture may be found in the sand at a depth of a few inches.

An idea of the rapidity with which the sand drifted before Mr. Abbott began his tree planting may be gained from the accompanying photographs, which show the original fence posts surrounding some of the fields now almost covered. Mr. Abbott is now, after a period of five or six years, cutting considerable timber from his forest plantations.

ALASKA A LAND OF BEAUTY

Traveler Tells of Its Many Attractions, Calling It Country of Enchantment.

Cook's inlet, with its arms and reaches, has many bewildering channels, resulting from the numerous rugged islands. The forbidding and embattled shores rising into lofty mountains, and at present swathed in white almost to the water's edge, possess a virility, a grandeur and sublimity which require the most poetic imagination and most facile pen even faintly to portray. The grand panorama reaches its climax in Mount McKinley, monarch of the North American continent. With its altitude of 20,460 feet it stands alone in lofty pride and is distinctly visible from the vessel, notwithstanding the very great distance. The fact well establishes the quality of the clarified and invigorating atmosphere of this far north country.

"A careful reading of literature pertaining to Alaska prepared me in part," the Hon. A. Barton Hepburn writes in Leslie's, "for what the journey was bound to disclose, but seeing is the only sense that can give knowledge and secure appreciation of the grandeur, the sublimity, the fascinating beauty of mountain, sea, stream, fiord, falls, islands, forests, clouds and the glorious color effects which the dazzling rays of the sun bring into existence. In connection with all these is a land of enchantment for all who love and can appreciate nature.

"The Thousand islands with all their beauty would scarcely serve as a prelude to the surpassing grandeur and loveliness of the many thousand islands that adorn the 3,000 miles of Alaskan coast. The fiords of Norway, the far-famed glaciers of Switzerland cannot compare with their counterparts to be found in Alaska in number, variety, size, color effect and all the qualities that give charm to these works of nature."

EXTRAORDINARY INDUCEMENT TO HOLD OUT.

Many a good yarn in regard to the Rough Riders, whom he commanded in the Spanish war, is told by Mr. Roosevelt, and these old friends are always willing at election times to assist him for the sake of old days. On a certain occasion a Rough Rider from Texas went with Mr. Roosevelt on an electioneering trip and made a speech in his favor. Unfortunately his intentions were better than his platform method, as when he got up to speak this is what he said:

"My fellow citizens, vote for Roosevelt! Vote for Roosevelt, and he will lead you as he led us—like sheep to the slaughter!"

The general laugh that followed, however, was not in any way prejudicial to Mr. Roosevelt's chances.—Chicago Herald Election Magazine

SNAKE IN FIGHT WITH YOUNG MAN

Comes Off Victorious in Desperate Battle Near a Pennsylvania Town.

LOSER IS IN HOSPITAL

Youth Starts Fight and Finds Reptile Only Too Eager for Combat—Bitten in the Hand, Man Gives Up.

Harrisburg, Pa.—A young man engaged in a fight with a big snake near Penbrook. In the end the serpent was victorious, getting off without any harm, while the man was severely bitten. The loser in the fight, Albert Miller, nineteen years old, of Penbrook, went to the Harrisburg hospital, where efforts were made to prevent blood poisoning.

When Miller was walking through the Penbrook cemetery recently, passing a large tree he saw a snake about four or five feet in length, with its fangs protruding and evidently ready to make an attack on him.

The youth did not wait for the reptile to act, but, instead, picked up a club and made for it. He dealt it a blow, but that only had the effect of inciting the snake, and it leaped for him.

Snake Eager to Continue.

Then came the battle. Lunging its fangs to their full extent, the serpent tried time and again to sink them into the young man's body, but for a time the youth managed to get away. Miller, however, kept wielding the club, and while so doing the snake shot its poisoned prongs into the youth's hand.

The snake seemed eager to continue the battle, but Miller started running away. The snake followed for a short distance and then gave up the chase.

Miller went to his home and applied antidotes to his hand, but these had no effect in stopping the intense pain which he suffered. Later he called upon a physician and the latter treated the injured member.

In the course of time the hand and arm began swelling, and when they became almost twice their normal size, Miller decided to come to Harrisburg to the hospital. The doctors hope to get the poison out of his system.

FOOT IN FROG; FACES DEATH

Directed Work of Rescue After Twenty-Four Cars Mangled Him.

Altoona, Pa.—After preparing to make a coupling in the Pennsylvania yards here, Brakeman H. Ward Hall slipped from his car and the next instant his right foot was caught in a switch frog. He struggled to free himself, but could not.

Then he tried frantically to save himself by signaling the engineer, who was pushing a draft of 24 cars toward him, but the man on the locomotive could not see him.

When members of his crew found him later, his right arm and right leg had been severed and he was pinned under a big steel car, but still conscious. Every car had run over him.

He directed the work of the men who were rescuing him, and was rushed to the hospital, where he died four hours later.

Her relatives gave her the first knowledge she had that a war is in progress in Europe. Mrs. Booker's home is near Middletown, Ky., 30 miles from a railroad, and almost as far from a highway. Once, several years ago, she saw a party of tourists in an automobile which had strayed from the road through the wilderness in which she had lived all her life.

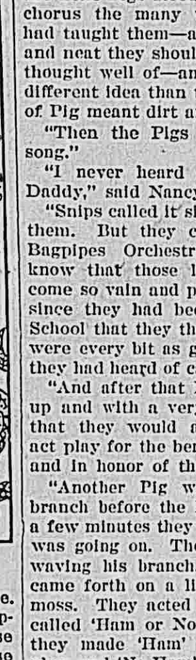

DADDY'S EVENING FAIRY TALE

By Mary Graham Bonner

PIGS SHOW WHAT THEY KNOW.

"Now, Snips, the little Gnome," said Daddy, "was getting along splendidly with the Pig School he had started, and he had invited the Fairies to come to the fine exhibition of knowledge and learning the Pigs were planning to give.

"All the Fairies, led by the Fairy Queen, went to the old hollow tree where Snips held School, and there they saw the Pigs sitting alongside the tree, waiting for their teacher, Snips, to come and ask them questions.

His Costume Was Rather Gay.

"They all had their stone slates and their sharp stone pencils, and were practicing their letters every little while. They were writing beautiful big P's, for their family name, more often than any other letter.

"Right on time came Snips. He was wearing a tall green hat and green spectacles on his nose, which very much amused the Fairies.

"They thought that his costume was rather gay for a School Teacher, but Snips had the idea that he must impress the Pigs with cleanliness and attractiveness—for, as he so truly said, they would just as soon wear tall hats and tall boots of mud!

"As for the Fairies, they came dressed in soft gray dresses with gray wings, and silver gray wands. They had said they wanted to look like little School Fairies.

"Soon Snips began his teaching. All the little Pigs stood up and recited in chorus the many wise things Snips had taught them—all about how clean and neat they should be in order to be thought well of—and to give people a different idea than that the very name of Pig meant dirt and mud.

"Then the Pigs sang their school song."

"I never heard of a Pig singing, Daddy," said Nancy.

"Snips called it singing to encourage them. But they called it the 'Pigs' Bagpipes Orchestra.' For, do you know that those little Pigs had become so vain and proud of themselves since they had been going to Snips' School that they thought their squeals were every bit as good as some music they had heard of called 'Bagpipes!'

"And after that Peter Pink Pig got up and with a very low bow he said that they would all give their one-act play for the benefit of the Fairies, and in honor of their Teacher, Snips.

"Another Pig waved a big, leafy branch before the Fairies so that for a few minutes they could not see what was going on. Then the Pig stopped waving his branch, and all the Pigs came forth on a little stage made of moss. They acted a very funny play called 'Ham or No Ham.' Of course they made 'Ham' the villain of the play, and 'No Ham' was the hero—the very finest Pig in the School. And they acted in such a funny way that the Fairies were laughing almost every moment—until towards the end of the play they wept because Ham, the villain, won, which meant that the little Pigs had been killed, and big folks had had ham for dinner. The Fairies were almost heartbroken over the ending. They were afraid that Snips had taught the Pigs too much, when along came the Mothers and Daddies of the Pigs in the School. They wore mud shoes and stockings and mud patches all over. They heard just the end of the play, and they said, 'It is fine to see the Pigs know so much, but they must fatten up and be lazy. We have such a happy life, and if in the end we're seized by the villain, why should be care?' And the Fairies laughed and said:

With a Low Bow.

"'All kinds of Pigs make up the Pig world, too, it seems—anyway, we've seen a very unusual play!'"

Potatoes, 63 bushels on an eighth of an acre.

Field corn, 50.4 bushels (shelled) on one acre.

CANADA'S EXCELLENT FINANCIAL STANDING

Bank Clearings Increase—Agriculture Is a Paying Industry—Manufactures Doing Well.

"Business experts assert that Canada is on the threshold of perhaps the most prosperous era in her history. The unprecedented value of the farm products of 1915, together with the very large output of factories working on munitions of war has suddenly brought the country into a position, financially, scarcely hoped for as a nation for years to come. Export surplus of $50,000,000 a month is making Canada very strong in cash."—Extract from official bulletin of February 11, 1916.

The response by the farmers of Canada to the call for increased production in 1915 was a total net output exceeding one billion dollars, an increase over normal years of at least three hundred millions. The three Prairie Provinces contributed probably nearly one-half of the total product.

The wheat crop was worth $310,000,000, and accounted for about 30 per cent of the total agricultural product. Other things counted also. Look at dairying. In Ontario the dairy production was increased 20 per cent, and prices were over 10 per cent ahead of 1914. Other provinces shared in the increase, especially Alberta, Saskatchewan, Quebec and Nova Scotia. The dairy cow was "on the job" in 1915. So also were the beef cattle, the pigs and the hens.

It is not fair to the farmers of the Prairies to call the wheat crop of 1915 a "miracle" crop. The farmers cultivated more land and gave attention to their seed. Providence gave them favorable weather. Then they toiled early and late in the harvesting and threshing. Good cultivation gave bigger yields than careless work, 45 bushels as against 25.

The wealth of Western Canada is by no means all in its wheat crop. If the country had no wheat at all it would still be famous as a land of successful farmers on account of its stock production. From one shipping point (High River, Alberta) over $75,000.00 worth of horses have been sold in the last two months. The average price to the farmer has been about $175.00 per head. According to Government returns there are a million and a half horses in Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta, worth probably $150,000,000.

The investments which farmers of Western Canada are making in livestock and farm improvements are good evidence of the fact that they have money for these purposes. It is apparent, however, that they are also spending some of their profits on those things which will bring greater comfort and enjoyment to themselves, their wives and their families. The automobile trade all through the country is particularly active, and farmers are the biggest buyers. A recent report of the Saskatoon district shows that in two months a million dollars' worth of automobiles have been sold, largely to farmers. Nor are all of these cars of the cheaper makes; some high-priced machines are in demand.

Bank clearings throughout the Western Provinces show greater commercial activity than at the same season in 1915 or 1914, the increase for the last week of February being $8,000,000 and almost $9,000,000, respectively, for the first week of March $15,000,000 over 1915 and $18,000,000 over 1914. The same excellent story comes from Moose Jaw, Sask., where they showed from 40 to 100 per cent over the previous year. Calgary, Alta., bank clearings continue to reflect the greatly improved business conditions as compared with a year ago. Canada's bank clearings for the month of February, 1916, were the greatest for any February in the country's history. The totals amounted to $664,222,000.00, as compared with $487,296,000.00 for the same month a year ago. An increase of $177,000,000.00 in bank clearings for the month tells its own story of the country's prosperity.—Advertisement.

An auto delivery truck which is said to be the property of R. Wendland of Lake Villa, evidently had a severe dizzy spell, near Charlie Harden's corner, Tuesday afternoon. At any rate it turned over on its side and laid there, a curious sight for all who passed that way. How the accident happened or who the occupants of the car were it is impossible to say. After a few days in the garage the car will be as good as new.

The pubic hearing on the sewer question. which had been set for Thursday afternoon, July 6, was again adjourned this time for the adjournment was that E. M. Runyard village attorney was unable to be present on account of the Orpet trial. Although he was represented by Attorney Decker, the board prefered to have Mr. Runyard on the grounds as he had directed all steps thus far. Another reason for adjournment was that some felt that the meeting should be held in the evening in order that everyone who felt inclined to do so might attend.

SYNOPSIS.

I grow tired of my work as a college instructor and buy a New England farm on sight. I inspect my farm and go to board at Bert Temple's. Bert helps me to hire a carpenter and a farmer. Hard Cider, the carpenter, estimates the repairs and changes necessary on the house.

How would you like to start in to work such a place as this man had saddled himself with, having no more knowledge of farming than he had? Will he know how and where to take hold?

"Fine again!" cried I. "A long room with two fireplaces, and a double-faced bookcase coming out at right angles between them, with two settles below it, one for each fireplace! Better than I'd dreamed!"

"Suit yerself," said Hard.

My front doorway had once been a thing of beauty, with two little panel windows at the sides, and above all, on the outside, a heavy, hand-carved broken pediment, like the top of a Governor Winthrop highboy. Hard looked at it with admiration gleaming in his eyes. "I'd ruther restore this than all the rest o' the job," he said, and his ugly, rum-soaked little face positively shone with enthusiasm.

"Go ahead," said I; "only I want the new steps of brick, widely spaced, with a lot of cement showing between. I'm going to terrace it here in front, too—a grass terrace for ten feet out."

"Thet's right, thet's right!" he exclaimed. "Now I'll go order the lumber an' bring yer the estimate termorrer."

"Seems to me the usual proceeding would be the other way around!" I gasped.

"Well, yer want me ter do the job, don't yer? Or don't yer?" he said brusquely.

"Of course, of course!" I amended hastily. "Go ahead!"

Hard climbed into a broken-down wagon, and disappeared. "Don't you worry," said Bert. "I'll see he treats yer right."

"It isn't that," I said sadly. "It's that I've just remembered I forgot to include any painters' bills in my own estimate."

Bert looked at me in a kind of speechless pity for a moment. Then he said slowly: "Wal, I'll be swizzled! Wait till I tell maw! An' her always stickin' up fer a college education!"

"Just for that, I'll show you!" cried I. "I never trimmed an apple tree in my life, but I'm going to work on this orchard, and I'm going to save it, all myself. It will be better than yours in three years."

"Go to it," laughed Bert. "Come back fer dinner, though. Neow I'll drive over ter the depot an' git yer freight. They telephoned this mornin' it had come."

"Good!" I cried. "You might bring me a bag of cement, too, and a gallon of carbolic acid."

"Ye ain't tired o' life so soon, be yer?"

"No," said I, "but I'm going to show you rubes how to treat an orchard."

Bert went off laughing, and presently I saw him driving toward town with his heavy wagon. I walked up to the plateau field to greet Mike. As I crested the ridge the field lay before me, the great, lone pine standing sentinel at the farther side, and half of it was frail, young green, and half rich, shining brown.

"Well Yer Want Me to Do the Job, Don't Yer?"

"She plows tough, sor," said Mike, as the panting horses paused for breath, "but she'll harrer down good. Be the seed pertaters come yit?"

"Bert has gone for them," said I. "Let me hold the plow once."

"It ain't so azy as it looks," said Mike.

"I'll do it if I haven't a rib left," said I grimly.

And I did it. My first full furrow looked like the track of a snake under the influence of liquor, but I reversed the plow and came back fairly straight. I was beginning to get the hang of it. My next furrow was respectable, but not deep. On this return trip the sweat was starting from my forehead, and the smell of the horses and of the warm, fresh-turned earth was strong in my nostrils. I didn't look at my pine. I was proud at what I had done, and my muscles gloried in the toil. Again I swung the plow around, and drove it across the field, feeling the reluctant grass roots fighting every muscle of my arms.

"There," said I, triumphantly, "you plow all the rest as deep as that!"

"Begobs, ye'z all right!" cried Mike.

I went back again down the slope with all the joy of a small boy and descended upon the orchard. I had a couple of bulletins on pruning in my pocket, with pictures of old trees remorselessly headed down. I took a fresh look at the pictures, reread some of the text where I had marked it, and tackled the first tree, carefully repeating to myself: "Remove only a third the first year, remove only a third the first year."

This, I decided, quite naturally did not refer to dead wood. By the time I had the dead wood cut out of that first old tree, and all the water sprouts removed (as I recalled my grandfather used to call them), which didn't seem necessary for new bearing wood, the poor thing began to look naked. On one side an old water spout or sucker had achieved the dignity of a limb and shot far into the air. I was up in the tree carefully heading this back and out when Bert came driving by with his wagon heaped to overflowing.

"Hi!" he called, "yer tryin' to kill them trees entire!"

I got down and came out to the road. "You're a fine man and a true friend, Mr. Temple," said I, "but I'm going to be the doctor for this orchard. A chap's got to have some say for himself, you know."

"Well, they ain't much good, anyhow, them trees," said Bert cheerfully.

We now fell to unloading the wagon. We opened up the woodsheds and storehouse behind the kitchen, stowed in the barrels of seed potatoes, the fertilizers, the various other seeds, the farm implements, sprayers, and so on. The hotbed frames and sashes were put away for future use, as it was too late to need them now. The horse hoe Bert had not been able to bring on this trip. Next we got my books and furniture into the house or shed, and, tired, hot and dirty, we drove on up the road for dinner. As we passed the upper field, I saw that the plowing was nearly done. The brown furrows had already lost their gloss, as my hands had already lost their whiteness.

"Well, I'm a farmer now!" said I, surveying my soil-caked boots and grimy clothes.

"Yer on the way, anyhow," said Bert. "But yer'll have ter cultivate thet field hard, seein's how it oughter hev been plowed last fall."

That afternoon I went back to my orchard, got out my shiny and sharp new doubled-edged pruning saw, and sawed till both arms ached.

As I worked, I thought how this orchard must be trimmed and cleaned up first, but how the fine planting weather was upon us, too, and I ought to be getting my garden seeds in, if I was to have any flowers. I thought, also, of all my manuscripts to be read. A nervous fit seized me, and I worked frantically.

That night I managed to keep awake till eleven, and got some work done. I also rose at a compromise hour of six in the morning, and worked another hour, almost catching up with what should have been my daily stint. But I realized that hereafter I could not work on the farm all day. I must give up my mornings to my manuscript reading.

"Well," thought I, "I'll do it—as soon as the orchard is finished."

As soon as the orchard was finished! I stood amid the litter I had made on the ground, and reflected. I had completed the preliminary trimming of one row and part of a second. There were still over two rows and a half to do. And the worst trees were in those rows, at that. After they were trimmed, there was all the litter to clear out, and the stubs to be painted, and cement work to be done.

"Good gracious!" thought I, "if I do all that, when will I plant, when will I make my lawn?"

* * * * * * *

Have you ever watched a small boy picking berries? He never picks a bush clean, but rushes after this or that big cluster of fruit which strikes the eye, covering half an acre of ground while you, perhaps, are stripping a single clump of bushes. And he is usually amazed when your pail fills quicker than his. Alas! I fear I was much like that small boy during my first season on the farm, or at any rate during the first month or two. There was little "efficiency" in my methods—but, oh, much delight!

As I had planned to put my garden coldframes along the south wall of the kitchen, I decided to make my temporary seedbeds there. Mike assented to the plan as a good one, and I had him dump me a load of manure, while I brought earth from the nearest point in the garden, spaded up the soil, mixed in the garden earth and dressing, and then worked and reworked it with a rake, and finally with my hands.

Ah, the joy of working earth with your naked hands, making it ready for planting! The ladies I had seen in their gardens always wore gloves. Even my mother, I recalled, in her little garden, had always worn gloves. Surely, thought I, they miss something—the cool, moist feel of the loam, the very sensations of the seeds themselves. At four o'clock I had my bed ready, and I got my seed packets, sorted them in a tin tobacco box, and began to sow the seeds. The directions which I read with scrupulous care always said, "Press the earth down firmly with a board." I was working with a flat mason's trowel, so I got up and found a board. It wasn't half so easy to work with, but I was taking no chances!

Mike and Joe were unhitching the horse from the harrow as I finished. The great, brown slope of the vegetable garden, lying away from the house toward the ring of southern hills, was ready for planting. There was my farm, thence would come my profits—if profits there should be. But just at that moment the little strip of soaked seedbed behind me was more important. It stood for the color box with which I was going to paint, for the fragrant pigments out of which I should create about my dwelling a dream of gardens.

"After all," I thought, "a country place is but half realized without its garden, even though it be primarily a farm, and the richness of country living is but half fulfilled unless we become painters with shrub and tree and flower. I cannot draw, nor sing, nor play. Perhaps I cannot even write. But surely I can express myself here, about me, in color and landscape charm, and not be any the worse farmer for that. I have my work; I shall write; I shall be a farmer; I shall be a gardener—an artist in flowers; I shall make my house lovely within; I shall live a rich, full life. Surely I am a happy, a fortunate man!"

I put the watering pot back in the shed, crossed the road to the old wooden pump by the barn on a sudden impulse, and pumped water on my hands and head, for I was hot. Mike stood in the barn door and laughed.

"What are yez doin' that for?" he asked.

I stood up and shook the water from my face and hair. "Just to be a kid, I guess." I laughed.

There are some things Mike couldn't understand. Perhaps I did not clearly understand myself. In some dim way an old pump before a barn and the shock of water from its spout on my head was fraught with happy memories and with dreams. The sight of the pump at that moment had waked the echo of their mood.

But as I plodded up the road in the May twilight to supper, one of those memories came back with haunting clearness—a summer day, a long tramp, the tender wistfulness of young love shy at its own too sudden passion, the plunge of cool water from a pump, and then at twilight half-spoken words, and words unspoken, sweeter still!

The amethyst glow went off the hills that ring our valley, and a far blue peak faded into the gathering dusk. A light shivered off my spirit, too. I felt suddenly cold, and the cheery face of Mrs. Temple was the face of a stranger. I felt unutterably lonely and depressed. My farm was dust and ashes. That evening I savagely turned down a manuscript by a rather well-known author, and went to bed without confessing what was the matter with me. The matter was, I had pumped up a ghost.

At least he can plow—a little. And trim trees—a little. But wait until he breaks loose in an entirely different direction and then figure out just how long his money is going to last.

TWINS IN PRISON FOR LIKE CRIMES

Finger Prints Only Means by Which the Two Can Be Told Apart.

San Francisco. — Two brothers, twins, as alike in appearance as two peas in a pod, have been discovered in the rogues' gallery records to be serving separate sentences of five years for burglaries committed in Los Angeles.

When the pictures of the brothers reached Adolph Juhl, head of the police identification bureau here, it was thought at first that the prison records were in error, that through some slip two records had been made out for the same man. Juhl immediately wired to the officials at San Quentin and Folsom, asking for the finger prints of Mesak Kartangan, which is the name claimed by both men, and it was only when the prints were examined under the glass that it was found that there were two separate and distinct Mesak Kartangans.

The men have prison records in various parts of the country, and both are graduates of reformatories.

One was convicted March 20, 1915, and the other March 18 of this year. They are twenty-two years old.

TAKES CLOTHES FOR DEBT

Because He Is Unable to Collect $3 Farmhand Seizes Four Suits.

Indianapolis, Ind.—William Devine, a farm laborer, explained in the criminal court that, being unable to collect $3 from James Boyce, living near Flackville, he took four suits of clothes as payment. He admitted he was generous to himself, for the suits were of excellent quality and appearance.

"First I put on one suit," he said, "and then I thought how much better it looked on me than it did on Boyce, so I took the others."

With the disappearance of his suits and Devine, Boyce came before the grand jury and an indictment was returned against the farm laborer. Boyce paid $19 to find and return Devine to the city to face the larceny charge. Devine went to Madison, Ind., after taking the suits.

Judge Collins sentenced Devine to the penal farm for 90 days.

BUTTONS LET GO; SAVES LIFE

Man Is Whirled Around Shaft When Clothing Gets Caught in Machinery.

Chester, Pa.—His clothing becoming entangled in machinery at the plant of the Tindel-Morris company of Eddystone, J. T. Hargoot of Philadelphia was whirled around a shaft and would have been killed had not the buttons on his overalls ripped off, allowing him to drop to the floor. Hargoot, who had been working at the plant less than an hour when the accident happened, is in the Chester hospital with a fractured skull, a broken right arm and numerous other injuries. Physicians expect him to recover, however. Hargoot had purchased a new pair of overalls, but did not put them on when he went to work. He is satisfied had he worn them instead of using an old worn pair he would have been held to the shafting until he was whirled to his death.

LIGHT TOUCH SAVES A LIFE

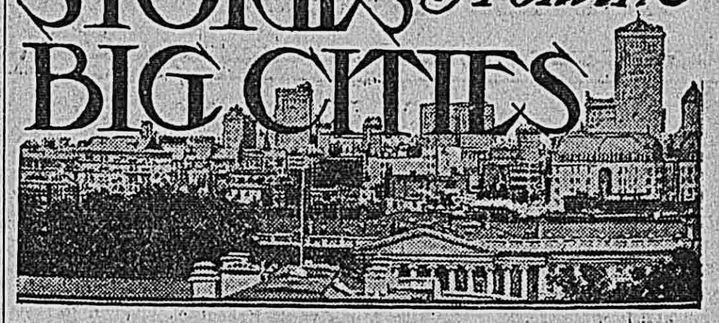

Ohio Locomotive Engineer Backs Engine Gently, Releasing Hurt Brakeman.

Lorain, O.—The light throttle touch of William Rawlings, a railroad engineer, recently saved the life of Elmer Stephens, a brakeman, here.

Stephens was caught between two loaded coal cars, which buckled. His feet were crushed and his body held as in a vise.

But Engineer Rawlings backed his engine to the rear car and without touching it stopped near enough to permit a coupling. Had he bumped his locomotive into the car, Stephens would have been crushed to death. As the cars were pulled apart the brakeman was released and fell unconscious.

STORIES from the BIG CITIES

Why Snakes Roamed in Classic Chicago Suburb

CHICAGO.—It was Main street, Evanston, the classic suburb of this city. It was after midnight—some minutes past the time when a great industry in Chicago closes up for a day. The thick-set man was ambling slowly along the walk, at peace with the world. He was even singing. Suddenly he stopped; a small garter snake had wriggled across his path.

The song ended. The man closed his eyes, and laughed foolishly. Then he opened them again. This time there were two snakes on the walk.

The man threw his hat at them, laughed nervously, and walked on. And every few feet he saw more snakes.

Three college students, walking arm in arm, exuberant vocally, stared stupidly at the snakes, turned and ran. A thin man with his hat askew screamed that he was bitten.

The reason?—The "tub scouts"—the boys of the block, annoyed at the regular Saturday night and Sunday morning demonstrations on Main street, collected two pails of snakes Saturday morning and put them to work.

Tips and "War Babies" Form Rich Combination

NEW YORK.—Here is evidence that the "War Babies" have increased the bank roll of the serving man. The other day a guest of the Plaza hotel found a bank book in the grill showing deposits of $25,000. He turned it over to the management of the hotel. The book was placed in the safe and the clerks notified to look out for the owner.

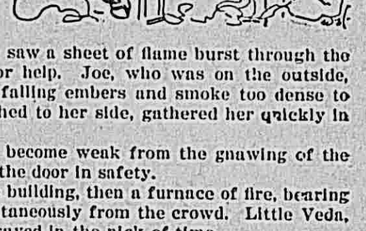

For several days it was noticed that one of the servitors was wearing a mournful look, but his associates thought he was laboring under the burden of some great tragedy. He was. He was wondering who had found his bank book. It was quite by accident that the waiter, who is a firm believer in the tipping system, overheard the assistant manager telling of the finding of the bank book. A few minutes later the deft juggler of eatables approached the hotel official and diffidently asked him to get the bank book, and please not to "tip off" the head waiter that it was his, for the latter might think it was time for him to retire on his income. The assistant manager breathed heavily, for he had just tipped this waiter.

The waiter was much relieved. But the various officials of the hotel, from managing director to the room clerks, are all wearing deeply thoughtful expressions.

Heroic Seven-Year-Old Boy Saves a Baby Girl

PITTSBURGH, PA.—"I rescued the gir-r-r-l, but it wasn't nothin' brave," murmured Joseph Bright, seven years old, joint hero with Robert Culpass, nine, in the saving of the life of little Veda Johnston, four, when the Johnston home at McKees Rocks was destroyed by fire.

Veda was in a first-floor bedroom when the fire began. As the flames, which started on the second floor, ate their way quickly through the thin partitions and floors of the dry frame building, the child remained in the room, for the moment forgotten by the frantic mother and the excited neighbors.

Then, discovering it was difficult to breathe in the fast-thickening smoke and becoming terror-stricken when she saw a sheet of flame burst through the wall beside her, the baby screamed for help. Joe, who was on the outside, heard the little girl's cries, and, amid falling embers and smoke too dense to endure for more than the moment, rushed to her side, gathered her quickly in his arms and rushed for the door.

The floor of the room had already become weak from the gnawing of the flames, but Joe and his burden reached the door in safety.

As the little hero emerged from the building, then a furnace of fire, bearing the girl in his arms, a cheer broke spontaneously from the crowd. Little Veda, the pet of the neighborhood, had been saved in the nick of time.

Wrong Tune Silenced Detroit Wedding Bells

DETROIT.—Louie Fuchs wants to get back at the head of his German band, but he can't. Joseph Wilczek wants to get married, but he can't. The reason is a little altercation which occurred on the East side several days ago when Wilczek became offended at a piece Fuchs and his band were playing.

Wilczek became so angered that he struck Fuchs over the head and "drove out all of the latter's musical talents."

Wilczek was arrested for this act and fined $25 in police court. The crowd in the courtroom was surprised when a pretty young woman stepped up and paid his fine.

"We're going to be married soon and I want to pay his fine," she told the reporters. But Fuchs didn't even recover his musical powers while chuckling over the embarrassment that he had caused Wilczek in police court. He started out with his band, but he couldn't "get anything across." They had to give it up for a bad job.

So Fuchs sought further revenge. Through his attorney, Louis Ott, he started suit against Wilczek in Justice Theodore Richter's court for $500 damages, alleging that Wilczek had destroyed all of his musical talents.

"I can't play nothing," said Fuchs. "Since that knock on the head I don't know one tune from another. I am like a baby. My doctor says that I may never be able to play again."

Wilczek's sweetheart, who came to his aid in police court, refused to marry him until his troubles are settled.

"I want this thing settled," she said. "I don't want any cloud hanging over our head or anything to mar the wedding bells."

So Wilczek is as anxious to get the case settled as is Fuchs, who is praying for power once more to play his bass viol and direct the band.

Meanwhile the other members of the German band are searching around for a leader to assume the duties of the heart-broken Louie.

CAKE NOT UP TO HIS EXPECTATIONS.

Having heard that the open season was at hand for strawberry shortcake, a Columbus young man went to a restaurant and ordered a portion. He had visions of the kind his mother used to make—two layers of genuine cake, with strawberries in between and so many on top that the cake was hidden. He remembered how the biggest, sweetest and best berries were saved for the cake that mother made. And ever it would go some sort of mixture of sugar, strawberry juice and butter. Then you could have real cream if you wished. While he was dreaming of the past, a waiter brought his shortcake. It was so little he looked twice to find it. A few little runty berries were on top and the whole proposition seemed to have died the day before.

"Here, waiter," the irate young man exclaimed, "take this cake out and berry it."—Indianapolis News.

WHY WOMEN WRITE LETTERS

To Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co.

Women who are well often ask "Are the letters which the Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co. are continually publishing, genuine?" "Are they truthful?" "Why do women write such letters?"

In answer we say that never have we published a fictitious letter or name. Never, knowingly, have we published untruthful letter, or one without the full and written consent of the woman who wrote it.

The reason that thousands of women from all parts of the country write such grateful letters to the Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co. is that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has brought health and happiness into their lives, once burdened with pain and suffering. It has relieved women from some of the worst forms of female ills, from displacements, inflammation, ulceration, irregularities, nervousness, weakness, stomach troubles and from the blues.

It is impossible for any woman who is well and who has never suffered to realize how these poor, suffering women feel when restored to health; their keen desire to help other women who are suffering as they did.

Tit for Tat.

Achy Joints Give Warning

A creaky joint often predicts rain. It may also mean that the kidneys are not filtering the poisonous uric acid from the blood. Bad backs, rheumatic pains, sore, aching joints, headaches, dizziness and urinary disorders are all effects of weak kidneys and if nothing is done, there's danger of more serious trouble. Use Doan's Kidney Pills, the best recommended kidney remedy.

An Iowa Case

Chas. E. Joslin, Independence, Iowa, says: "I followed railroading for twenty years, and it weakened my kidneys. I had a constant pain in the small of my back, and often when I overworked I got so lame and sore that I could hardly straighten. Seeing Doan's Kidney Pills advertised, I used them and they helped me right away. The pain and lameness was completely cured and I was restored to good health."

Common American Birds

Interesting information about them supplied by the Bureau of Biological Survey of the United States Department of Agriculture

Bluebird

Sialia sialis

Length, about six and one-half inches.

Range: Breeds in the United States (west to Arizona, Colorado, Wyoming, and Montana), southern Canada, Mexico, and Guatemala; winters in the southern half of the eastern United States and south to Guatemala.

Habits and economic status: The bluebird is one of the most familiar tenants of the farm and dooryard. Everywhere it is hailed as the harbinger of spring, and wherever it chooses to reside it is sure of a warm welcome. This bird, like the robin, phoebe, house wren, and some swallows, is very domestic in its habits. Its favorite nesting sites are crannies in the farm buildings or boxes made for its use or natural cavities in old apple trees. For rent the bird pays amply by destroying insects, and it takes no toll from the farm crop. The bluebird's diet consists of 68 per cent of insects to 32 per cent of vegetable matter. The largest items of insect food are grasshoppers first and beetles next, while caterpillars stand third. All of these are harmful except a few of the beetles. The vegetable food consists chiefly of fruit pulp, only an insignificant portion of which is of cultivated varieties. Among wild fruits elderberries are the favorite. From the above it will be seen that the bluebird does no essential harm, but on the contrary eats many harmful and annoying insects.

English Sparrow

Passer domesticus

Length, about six and one-fourth inches. Its incessant chattering, quarrelsome disposition, and abundance and familiarity about human habitations distinguish it from our native sparrows.

Range: Resident throughout the United States and southern Canada.

Habits and economic status: Almost universally condemned since its introduction into the United States, the English sparrow has not only held its own, but has ever increased in numbers and extended its range in spite of all opposition. Its habit of driving out or even killing more beneficial species and the defiling of buildings by its droppings and by its own unsightly structures, are serious objections to this sparrow. Moreover, in rural districts, it is destructive to grain, peas, beans, and other vegetables. On the other hand, the bird feeds to some extent on a large number of insect pests, and this fact points to the need of a new investigation of the present economic status of the species, especially as it promises to be of service in holding in check the newly introduced alfalfa weevil, which threatens the alfalfa industry in Utah and neighboring states. In cities most of the food of the English sparrow is waste material secured from the streets.

Downy Woodpecker

Dryobates pubescens

Length, six inches. Our smallest woodpecker; spotted with black and white. Dark bars on the outer tail feathers distinguish it from the similarly colored but larger hairy woodpecker.

Range: Resident in the United States and the forested parts of Canada and Alaska.

Habits and economic status: This woodpecker is commonly distributed, living in woodland tracts, orchards, and gardens. The bird has several characteristic notes, and, like the hairy woodpecker, is fond of beating on a dry resonant tree branch a tattoo which to appreciative ears has the quality of woodland music. In a hole excavated in a dead branch the downy woodpecker lays four to six eggs. This and the hairy woodpecker are among our most valuable allies, their food consisting of some of the worst foes of orchard and woodland, which the woodpeckers are especially equipped to dig out of dead and living wood. In the examination of 723 stomachs of this bird, animal food, mostly insects, was found to constitute 76 per cent of the diet and vegetable matter 24 per cent. The animal food consists largely of beetles that bore into timber or burrow under the bark. Caterpillars amount to 16 per cent of the food and include many especially harmful species. Grasshopper eggs are freely eaten. The vegetable food of the downy woodpecker consists of small fruit and seeds, mostly of wild species. It distributes seeds of poison ivy, or poison oak, which is about the only fault of this very useful bird.

Chipping Sparrow

Spizella passarina

Length, about five and one-fourth inches. Distinguished by the chestnut crown, black line through eye, and black bill.

Range: Breeds throughout the United States, south to Nicaragua, and north to southern Canada; winters in the southern United States and southward.

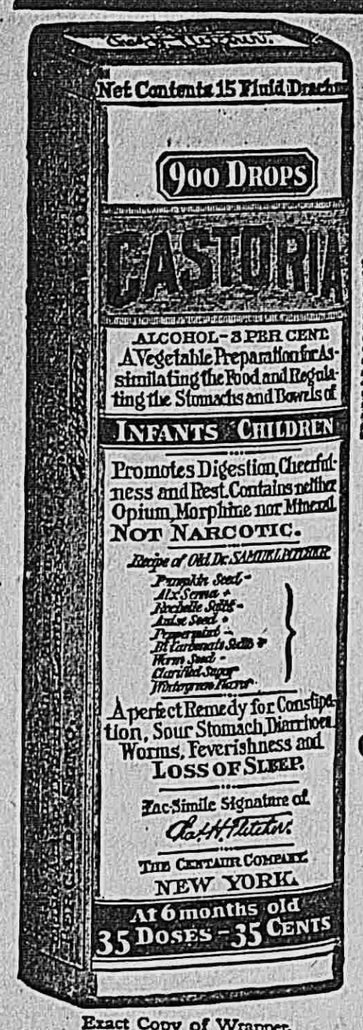

Habits and economic status: The chipping sparrow is very friendly and domestic, and often builds its nest in gardens and orchards or in the shrubbery close to dwellings. Its gentle and confiding ways endear it to all bird lovers. It is one of the most insectivorous of all the sparrows. Its diet consists of about 42 per cent of insects and spiders and 58 per cent of vegetable matter. The animal food consists largely of caterpillars, of which it feeds a great many to its young. Besides these, it eats beetles, including many weevils, of which one stomach contained 30. It also eats ants, wasps, and bugs. Among the latter are plant lice and black olive scales. The vegetable food is practically all weed seed. A nest with four young of this species was watched at different hours on four days. In the seven hours of observation 119 feedings were noted, or an average of 17 feedings per hour, or four and one-fourth feedings per hour to each nestling. This would give for a day of 14 hours at least 238 insects eaten by the brood.

Footman Was a Poet.

At least one domestic servant—though a male and not a female one—made a lasting contribution to English literature in the eighteenth century. This was Robert Dodsley, who as a young man served as a footman, and brought out his first works, "Servitude: a Poem," and "The Muse in Livery, or the Footman's Miscellany," while still in service. With the proceeds of these works and a farce, "The Toyshop," produced at Convent Garden, he set up as a bookseller in Pall Mall, and within a few years became the most prominent of London publishers, issuing books for Pope, Johnson and Goldsmith, inaugurating the "Annual Register," and still trifling with the muse himself, besides collecting and editing an invaluable selection of "Old Plays."—London Chronicle.

Very Likely.

"I wonder why they call them stag parties?" remarked the man who had just received an invitation to attend one.

"It's probably an allusion to that well-known quotation: 'The stag at eve had drunk his fill.'" replied his wife meaningly.

Nothing is more unsatisfactory than love that has to be purchased.

No Danger.

"I ought to go and see a doctor, but I'm afraid he'll order me to give up smoking."

"Don't let that worry you. I'll introduce you to a doctor who owns a lot of stock in the Tobacco Trust."

It pays to be a heathen at times—especially when there is a collection being taken up for him.

The man who walks wires may be skillful, but he isn't in it with the politician who pulls them.

The Wheat Yield Tells the Story of Western Canada's Rapid Progress

160 ACRE FARMS IN WESTERN CANADA FREE

The heavy crops in Western Canada have caused new records to be made in the handling of grains by railroads. For, while the movement of these heavy shipments has been wonderfully rapid, the resources of the different roads, despite enlarged equipments and increased facilities, have been strained as never before, and previous records have thus been broken in all directions.

The largest Canadian wheat shipments through New York ever known are reported for the period up to October 15th, upwards of four and a quarter million bushels being exported in less than six weeks; and this was but the overflow of shipments to Montreal, through which point shipments were much larger than to New York.

Yields as high as 60 bushels of wheat per acre are reported from all parts of the country; while yields of 45 bushels per acre are common.

Thousands of American farmers have taken part in this wonderful production. Land prices are still low and free homestead lands are easily secured in good localities, convenient to churches, schools, markets, railways, etc.

There is no war tax on land and no conscription.

Typewriter Service in Rural Communities

The typewriter is coming into more extended use in rural communities because of the assistance it renders to all classes of people. Here are a few examples of the possibilities of service:

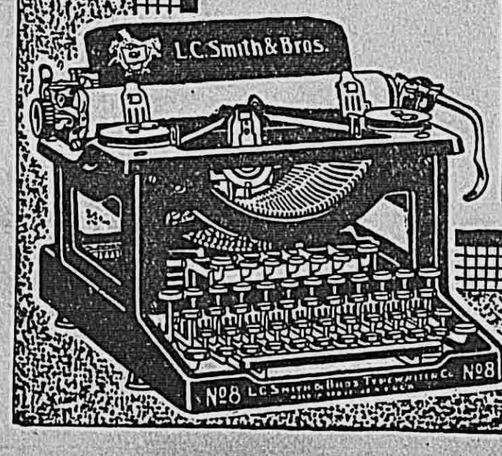

The Farmer: Think of the possibilities of selling produce by the means of typewritten letters sent out to customers? Typewritten letters give the sender a business standing with the people who receive them and also enable the keeping of carbon copies of the correspondence, which many times does away with misunderstandings and lawsuits.

The General Store Merchant: More prompt and courteous treatment is likely to be accorded his orders and correspondence with the City jobber and manufacturer if his letters are typewritten.

In The Home: The boy or girl who is intending to follow a business career can secure no better start than a knowledge of typewriter operating. Children who learn to use the typewriter learn spelling at the same time. The housewife finds it a great convenience in writing recipes and for general correspondence.

The Minister: No Clergyman should be without a typewriter. It is of great assistance in preparing sermons and writing the many letters that a pastor has to write.

Federal Inquiry or Railroad Strike?

Faced by demands from the conductors, engineers, firemen and brakemen that would impose on the country an additional burden in transportation cost of $100,000,000 a year, the railroads propose that this wage problem be settled by reference to an impartial Federal tribunal.

With these employes, whose efficient service is acknowledged, the railroads have no differences that could not be considered fairly and decided justly by such a public body.

Railroads Urge Public Inquiry and Arbitration

The formal proposal of the railroads to the employes for the settlement of the controversy is as follows:

"Our conferences have demonstrated that we cannot harmonize our differences of opinion and that eventually the matters in controversy must be passed upon by other and disinterested agencies. Therefore, we propose that your proposals and the proposition of the railways be disposed of by one or the other of the following methods:

1. Preferably by submission to the Interstate Commerce Commission, the only tribunal which, by reason of its accumulated information bearing on railway conditions and its control of the revenue of the railways, is in a position to consider and protect the rights and equities of all the interests affected, and to provide additional revenue necessary to meet the added cost of operation in case your proposals are found by the Commission to be just and reasonable; or, in the event the Interstate Commerce Commission cannot, under existing laws, act in the premises, that we jointly request Congress to take such action as may be necessary to enable the Commission to consider and promptly dispose of the questions involved; or

2. By arbitration in accordance with the provisions of the Federal law" (The Newlands Act).

Leaders Refuse Offer and Take Strike Vote

Leaders of the train service brotherhoods, at the joint conference held in New York, June 1-15, refused the offer of the railroads to submit the issue to arbitration or Federal review, and the employes are now voting on the question whether authority shall be given these leaders to declare a nation-wide strike.

The Interstate Commerce Commission is proposed by the railroads as the public body to which this issue ought to be referred for these reasons:

No other body with such an intimate knowledge of railroad conditions has such an unquestioned position in the public confidence

The rates the railroads may charge the public for transportation are now largely fixed by this Government board.

Out of every dollar received by the railroads from the public nearly one-half is paid directly to the employes as wages; and the money to pay increased wages can come from no other source than the rates paid by the public.

The Interstate Commerce Commission, with its control over rates, is in a position to make a complete investigation and render such decision as would protect the interests of the railroad employes, the owners of the railroads, and the public.

A Question For the Public to Decide

The railroads feel that they have no right to grant a wage preferment of $100,000,000 a year to these employes, now highly paid and constituting only one-fifth of all the employes, without a clear mandate from a public tribunal that shall determine the merits of the case after a review of all the facts.

The single issue before the country is whether this controversy is to be settled by an impartial Government inquiry or by industrial warfare.
